Cancer Association of GNO

Many times, patients find themselves unable to afford basic necessities and are making tough decisions between needed treatment and household expenses, but because of St. John United Way's funding, patients are able to stay in their homes and complete needed treatment. By assisting St. John residents with prescriptions, co-pays and supplies, CAGNO assures that patients are adhering to treatment protocols. Gas cards allows a cancer patient travel back and forth to their treatment and doctor appointments.

Child Advocacy Services

CASA volunteers give of their time and talents to speak up for children navigating a complex court and child welfare system. Research has shown that children with CASA volunteers receive more services and are less likely to return to the foster care system after their case closes. By having a CASA volunteer on a case, the child has a voice to speak for them in the court. Several children were reunified with their families or obtained a forever home through adoption.

In St. John Parish, CAS CAC partners with the Sheriff's Office who provides forensic interviews for children who have disclosed abuse while the CAC offers all ancillary services including advocacy, clinical services, and prevention education. Clinical services include individual, family, and group counseling on a referral basis to victims, non-offending family members, and outside community members.

Survivors receive services that are non-blaming and are led to make choices to determine the best course of action for their future lives.

Metro has three safe housing units available to Metro's clients only. Assisting survivors in becoming self-sufficient requires a multi-faceted approach through the progression from shelter to independent living, requires that survivors reach a level of stabilization (in Metro's emergency shelter) after the trauma they have experienced, are able to locate jobs and can find affordable, safe housing. The three safe housing units provides the survivors with the time they need to reach independence.
